• Study will provide novel insight into the immediate early susceptibility factors of upper airway epithelial cells to SARS-CoV-2 that contribute to a dysregulated inflammatory response, and thus provide possible treatments to reduce inflammatory responses to SARS-CoV-2.

WHAT TO EXPECT FOR FALL 2020

FIU’s priority is looking out for your health and making sure you earn your degree on time. One of the biggest ways we’re doing that is by adjusting how we deliver your learning. Here’s a brief refresher on what’s different about Fall 2020:

The Four Ways

The key thing to remember are the four new ways to take classes this Fall:

1. In-person. This is the classic classroom experience: the class meets in a classroom at scheduled days and times—only now there’ll be changes in classroom layout to accommodate physical distancing.

2. Hybrid. Hybrid courses meet in a classroom only some of the time (with classroom layout changes for physical distancing) while you do much of coursework online.

3. Remote. A virtual version of the traditional classroom. This means everyone in your class meets virtually at scheduled days and times. Attendance is required.

4. Fully Online. These courses take place exclusively on Canvas. While you don’t have to show up at a scheduled time or place, you’ll need to keep up with the activities and due dates. Distance learning fees apply.
